Mr. Buchanan Endorsed. Buchanan Democracy, in such a State sa Massachusetts, would soon come to be at at heavy discount, if it were not for the vitalizing and encouraging influence of Presidential patronage. It is that which operates to keep up the party organization, to sustain its presses, to reward its favorites, and to justify the most abound and extravagant policy that may be pursued at Wa hing ton. Let this Executive patronage be once ewept away, and all hopes of federal offices be cut off within the old Bay State, and the Shain Democracy there would mon grow a small by degrees and heautfully less,"-though, truth to speak, it is not over large now.

Mr. Brach, the Buchson nominee for Governor of Massachusetts, has lately made a speech at Charlestown, in which it seems he took oreasion to go into a wholesale and unreserved laudation of the policy purened by the present federal Excutive, as every thing that was purely democratic, vastly orthodox, and extensively patriotic. There seemed to be no flaws, mistakes, or errors any where within the range of the duties and policy of President Buchanan, All his sayings and doings in regard to Kaneas-however parverse, contradictory and anti-republican in other eyes-the very flush and boastful money talk of the annual message to Congress, and the queer sud incongruous demand that soon followed for two loans of Twenty Million Dollars each-the Jonnas faced course of the administration relative to Walkers filibustering expeditions, and the governmental attitude in respect to Cuba -- all these and plenty of other things alluded to by Mr. Reach, in his talk to the people at Charlestonn, were just as nearly correct, in the estimation of that geotleman, as any thing could possibly be. Indeed, we think it may be doubted whether the administration of Thomas Jefferson would have begin to give any thing like as much satisfaction to the genlemen of Massachusetts, as that of Mr. Ruchanan has evidently done.

Well, now, this nort of talk doled out by a Buchanan partisan, in the shadow of Bunker Hill, might do, as the proverh says, to "tell to the mannes." Hut is there may particular use (beyond the chance of fedupon the enlightened and independant voters of Massachusetts? Not the least in the world,

A SAD SCENE. While passing yesterday in a neighborhood where the yellow lever has been attended with some fatal results, we stopped as a house where, but a few day ago, dwelt a family in the enjoyment of good breith and all the comforts which an industrious husband and father was enabled to trious husband and father was enabled to provide. LOCAL NEWS.

LPA large and warm-hearted assemblage of the citizens of Newport, last evening, said "good live" and "God speed" to the Teachers' Institute. We feel entirely within bounds in declaring our opinion that no course of lectures, nor series of meetings of any kind, ever carried with them, at the time of leave-taking, a mora sincere respect than has followed these .-Upon sitting down to pen the accompanying lines, we are, for our part, deeply impressed with a sense of the important and beneficent character of such a gathering as has just been witnessed here, and are more than happy to be able, while submitting our individual convictions of its excellence, to be affording, at the same time, a sort of united and definite expression of the nentiment of our community upon the subject, A Teachers' Institute forwards the Cause of Education, in a vast variety of ways. Its very name, which has I come associated with a noble deforence to the Teacher's calling, liberal exercise of the sacred duties of Hospitality, valuable counsel, attractive systems of discipline, intellectual amusements, instant and harmonious organizations, and, above all, with most desirable, and with immediate results in the public schools, -is a tower of streng h, and a banner of pride, to the interests of Popular Education. The minds upon whom commonly devolves the charge of instruction, at an Institute, are relieved, briefly, but completely, of their hurdens. They rejoice in information of a new order. They become inspirited with the eight of their own numbers. They experience a welcome and not unfounded satislaction, in a consciousness of the spirit of general intelligence which waits upon their morements. And worthy of especial consideration, is the fact, that they there put off their every-day airs of authority, and sit down with cheerful alserity for an interval of practical, scholar like obedience.

The extent of our columns does not allow of an ample-atill less of a . exhaustivetreatment of this subject. We are constrained to confine our remarks to the solitary occasion, which, having scarcely passed away from the topics of the literal " today," may be regarded as still before as,-And here we hasten to observe that the and Freehorn, in its favor. Superintendant of the Schools of this State, and each and every one of the officers and instructors who appeared in connection with this pleasant affair, are found, as well as courteous, in their acknowledgments to the people of this place. The Institute is universally applianded on a highly successful one, distancing the most sanguine hopes. To those families who kindly openwith whom they had no previous acquaintance, this fact will prove a very happy remembrance. Nor is it a slight matter of congratulation for those conductors, in reviewing the events of the week, that there were not wanting to their enterprise, persons of long established worth and fame who lent, not only the material and invincible aid of money, but also the more flattering, and no less substantial influence of their presence.

We expect it will be long before we shall have an opportunity to notice in our daily sheet, an event, about which we can entertain so much of unalloyed satisfaction; long before the citizens of Newport will be able to exert themselves more agreeably, pleasantly, and successfully, for good. But we confidently believe that an impetus in the progress of our Schools, will be soon detorted by those, at least, who have been at all intimately interested in them, and, not improbably by every one who cares to look for it. And should such an improvement result-no matter how slight, if only decided-should our great armies of children become benefiteil, though imperceptibly through some new force and vitality just acquired by their Teachers, there will have been performed, during the post week, in this ancient, conservative town, a piece of work that most inestimably advance the

On many accounts the northern part four city from the head of Broad preet towards the country, is the most desirable for suburban residences. This fact has until recently been overlooked as the tide of lashion apreading itself to the southward has kept all eyes turned in the direction of the Neck, but now while the rage for building on the Neck has somewhat calmed down the first mentioned tocality is the scene of active hulding arrangements.

A line new double house is being built on Broad street about half a mile from the State house by Hon, W. J. Swinburne ex-Mayor of the city and on the adjoining lot his brother-in-law William Mason Esq., la crecting a similar residence. The lots on which these mansions are being erected are both targe, giving an ample opportunity for the display of these in the arrangement of the ecrounding grounds.

Nearer the city, on Malbone Avenue, we notice a little gein of a cattage, nearly finished, which is being built by Mr. Godfrey Moffit, after a plan of his own, its site is brantiful, and we imagine that the land on this and the adjoining roads will soon he sold to those who will immediately improve it, as we understand that it is, much of it, for sale at an extremely reasonable price-

SHALER'S PATENT CARPET SWEEPER IS new article for the purpose its name implies, which has recently been introduced in Newport by Mr. Wm. Mason, Nos. 4 & 5 Washington Square. After a careful exnanination of this simple Machene we are led to believe that it is all that its patentee and his agent recommend it to be. It takes the dirt, dust and lint up from a carhet without creating any dust in the room swept; thus making no necessity for dusting furniture in a room after sweeping, hesides which its simplicity prevents it from getfing often out of order and when it does it can easily be repaired.

O where is our dainty, our darling, The daintiest darling of all?

The peaches are ripe in the garden,
The applicate ready to fall;
The blac grapes are dripping their honey
In sunchine upon the white wall;
O where are the lips, full and melting,
That looked up so peating and red,
When we dangled the sun-purpled bunches,

LOUKING GLASSES.—The process of their manufacture is one of the most curious their manutacture is one of the most conous of the modern arts, and is an extremely simple one. A sheet of tin foil, somewhat larger than the glass plate, is laid upon a smooth table, and quicksilver poured over it until the foil is covered with a thickness of a tenth of an inch or more. All impurof a tenth of an inch or more. All impurities being ewept off from the surface of the mercuty, and the glass plate made scrupulously clean, it is brought even with the edge of the table and pushed gently forwards, sideways, so as to slide over the mercury bath, its edge just dipping hencath its surface, so as to push before it all impurities, and to exclude all air-bubbles. We glass are then evenly applied to the glass, and the whole table inclined to such an angle as to tayor the deswing of the mercuty, and the glass plate made scrupuan angle as to favor the drawing of the superfluous mercury. This requires some days or weeks, according to the size of the plate. There is a constant risk in the plate. There is a constant risk in the whole process, even when the greatest care is practiced. The larger the glass, the greater the danger of breakage, and imperfections. Sometimes the along an crystalizes, producing flaws, which require the op-eration to be repeated. It is these courses of work that most inestimably advance the prosperity of this State, and not the less of the whole World!
